André Lurton Facts

- Considered the father of the Pessac-Léognan appellation, André Lurton was the largest landowner and producer of white wine in that appellation. This position is now held by André's son, Jaques Lurton, ensuring a rare level of quality control and value.
- In addition to Pessac-Léognan, André Lurton has properties located in the Entre-Deux-Mers, Lussac-Saint-Emilion, and Bordeaux appellations and six different Bordeaux estates that produce numerous château bottlings of red, white, and rosé wines.
- Each château has a winemaking team that is led by a cellar-master who seeks to express the unique terroir and personality of each estate.
- A pioneer in the use of innovative technologies (screwcaps, automated sorting tables, anaerobic presses, mechanical harvesting where appropriate, etc.), André Lurton marries Bordeaux traditions and terroirs with ultra-modern wine making techniques and facilities.
- André Lurton retains quantities of each vintage under the strictest cellar conditions to offer customers a choice of optimally mature older vintages and verticals.
- Chateau Bonnet is the number one André Lurton brand in the United States. It welcomes consumers into the luxurious world of Bordeaux estate wines while maintaining consumer-friendly packaging.
- All of the André Lurton vineyards in Pessac-Léognan are now certified with the highest sustainable certification: HVE 3.
- All of the André Lurton production sites earned membership and accreditation into the Conseil Interprofessionnel du Vin de Bordeaux's Wine Environmental Management System.
